Freedom to Roam — for Bushwalkers?

“Warning! Friendly Forest Workers Ahead!”

Thus claimed a sign in the highlands of Scotland, some 700 km into the Scottish National Trail. Scotland’s law provides the Right to Roam, law that has opened the country up to (almost) unfettered hiking access.

England’s Public Rights of Way, Bridleways and Permissive Access supports Freedom to Roam. And Europe is criss-crossed with a well-developed network of clearly signposted short (PR) and long (GR) distance tracks, giving hikers access to just about everywhere.

Is there something we could learn here in Australia?

Our presenter:

Bill Boyd is formerly President of Bushwalking NSW Inc. He is currently Newsletter Editor for NRBC and was previously NRBC President during a time of amazing growth and transition for the club.

Look forward to being entertained and informed by Bill Boyd....
